SECTION B (20MARKS)

3. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow:

The Bantu people and the Bushmen have very little in common. When they met in the seventeenth Century, the Bantu could not hold back the superior Bantu tribes. We can see the difference between the two groups by studying the ways in which they were living.

A Bantu tribe was usually much larger than a Bushmen group. Some Bantu tribes contained more than fifty thousand people. The head of the large tribe was the paramount chief. Then there were sub – divisions. Each division had its own chief.

There were laws among the Bantu and these laws were passed on by word of mouth. This was necessary because by then they had not yet learned how to write. The Bantu tribes were also more advanced than the Bushmen in agriculture and the keeping of cattle. They had many tools and weapons which they made from metals. Cattle were a source of wealth. They paid fines and debts cattle, they also paid "lobola" or bride price in cattle.

Land was also important among the Bantu. It was only the chief who gave land to the people. In any quarrel about land and the chief was the final judge. The chief was expected to know all the laws, as well as skills in hunting and war that made one to become chief.

On the other hand, the Bushmen did not live in large groups. A tribe of Bushmen consisted of about fifty hunter and their women and children. The chiefs of the group were the strongest man and the most skillful hunter in the tribe. A chief who failed to provide food and skins for his people was removed as chief.
